Women should carefully bathe their lips upon returning from a shopping expedition. The germs that float around in the air of the stores may carry disease, and one can never know where they will settle.

As a preventive, before going shopwash of boracle acid and water, with a few drops of camphor, is an excellent disinfectant to use—the same formula that is used as an eye wash. Also a little greasy lip stick (the kind that is sold in drug stores) when gently rubbed upon the lips before going out of doors will protect Prevention is the best protection. Chlidren need nothing as a protection, but much as a preventive. Dangers may be averted or driven away by a little precaution. Children should be forbidden to kiss any one. And little mouths should be washed after each meal sacredly.

Tech would keep healthy for years longer if absolute cleanliness was longer at the time wasted at adhered to. And the time wasted at a family gathering by kissing all around might be better employed. There is more honest love conveyed in a sincere hand shake and a genuine 'I'm glad to see you" than a kiss, especially if the word be true
We should not look for trouble.

And when it does come we should try to drive it away by denying its pow-er. But we should do a few things to prevent troubles attacking Nature does play some wild pranks with us at times. When we are endowed with intellect and even a little beauty we should protect what there is of it from illness and devastation.

There is nothing so detrimental to beauty as mouth breathing. The lips are not closed properly. Sometimes are not closed properly this faulty closing of the mouth alters the whole appearance of the face, the setting of the lower jaw giving the appearance of a receding or a protruding chin. The position of the chin is also spoiled on account of the way the teeth come together when the mouth is closed.

As a result of mouth breathing the lips become thick, their muscles are used, so that they become weak. and speech is indistinct; even stamics, cakes, pies, doughnuts, etc., to-mering may result and becomes a gether.
